Wood Facts

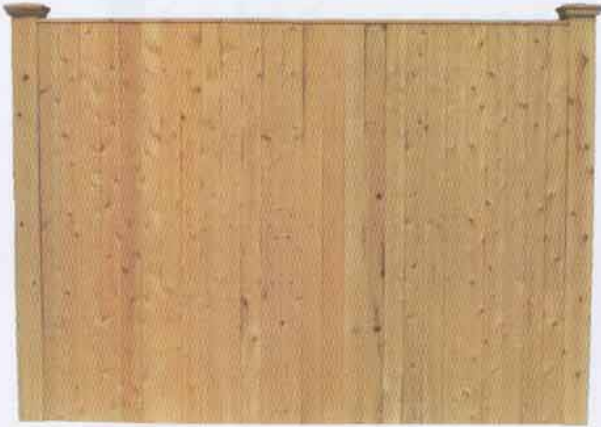

Northern White Cedar

Northern White Cedar, is very light in weight, of low shrinkage, soft, and comparatively free of warpage. The heartwood is resistant to decay, making it especially desirable for service in contact with ground. Cedar's untreated life expectancy is 15 - 20 years, as compared to raw spruce's life expectancy of 3 - 7 years.

Checking

As round or square timbers dry out and season, they often develop what appears to be a split or crack, more accurately known as a "check." Checking is a natural part of the seasoning process that does not harm the durability or stability of the product. It is almost always likely to occur.
